$3,400 in bursaries up for grabs

by Debbie Dansey

The January 1992 issue is one of the best ways to find the bursaries for students in Ontario's Colleges of Arts and Sciences.

It includes a list of almost 400 bursaries offered by over 100 different organizations. It also lists the criteria for each bursary, the amount of the award, and the deadline for applications.

Each bursary has its own application form and instructions. Some bursaries are open to all students, while others are restricted to specific groups of students.

The bursaries are listed in alphabetical order by the name of the organization offering them. They are also listed by the amount of the award, from smallest to largest.

Students who are interested in applying for a bursary should contact the organization offering it for more information. They should also check with their college's financial aid office for more information.

Students who are unable to pay for their education should contact the bursaries office at the college they are attending. They should also check with their college's financial aid office for more information.

Surveying

Surveying with a theodolite.

Surveying is the process of measuring the distance and area of a piece of land. It is a very important part of many different professions, including engineering, architecture, and land development. Surveyors use a variety of instruments to measure land, including theodolites, levels, and tapes.

Toronto seminar discusses getting rich

by Laurie Murray

On Sept. 29, a small audience of about 100 people gathered at the University of Toronto to attend a seminar on "Getting Rich." The seminar was presented by the University of Toronto's Centre for Entrepreneurship.

The seminar was presented by the University of Toronto's Centre for Entrepreneurship. It was a very interesting and informative seminar, and it was a great opportunity for students to learn more about entrepreneurship.
